

The Heavens — The Work Of God's Fingers

Disclaimer: this is an automatically generated machine transcription - there may be small errors or mistranscriptions. Please refer to the original audio if you are in any doubt.

Date: 22 April 2022

Preacher: Calum Macdonald

[0 : 00] The 22nd of April. The heavens, the work of God's fingers. Psalm 8 verse 3. I look at your heavens, the work of your fingers. King David of Israel was the writer of the Psalm. David wasn't brought up in a palace. His father wasn't a king. David was the youngest of all his brothers and was a shepherd boy in his early years and he knew and loved everything about the natural world around him.

I think it's very easy to see how David, with his strong poetic talent, just loved to sing about the world around him, the world which God has made. I've always loved the way David writes about the sky in this Psalm. You can imagine him lying on his back in the open one starry night and just marvelling in the glorious beauty of the stars. He saw them as jewels set in a staggeringly lovely setting. All the work of God's fingers. God is so mighty and so fond of beauty.

When we live in a city, perhaps we don't take the time to appreciate the creation of God. The bright lights of the city tend to make it difficult to see the stars in their glory. When everything around us is man-made, the buildings, the roads, the lights and so on, we are apt to leave God out of the picture. But this should not be so. We must never forget our Creator God. All the artistry of God went into the creation of the heavens, but also into the creation of people. What is man? asks David. Then he tells us, people receive God's special attention. And a prayer. Dear Lord, help me to give my special attention to you. Amen.